Pa. legislative leaders ask Justice David Wecht to recuse from state redistricting case

According to an article posted on line by PennLive© Republican state legislative leaders have opened a new front in their battle to stop a court-ordered, 11th-hour remapping of Pennsylvania's 18 seats in the U.S. House of Representatives. The new motion asks Justice David Wecht to recuse himself from the case, on grounds that Wecht's prior public statements on gerrymandering issues in general - and this map in particular - mean he could not have approached the case as an impartial judge, as required by the state code of judicial conduct. To view entire article, go to:

Isn't it interesting how some Republicans do not want the Legislative Districts to be more fairly represented. Apparently, they must have no problem with going to extremes to look after their own interests while ignoring fair representation. What are they afraid of? Obviously being voted out.

It's high time union members and working people start looking at doing what is best for them, because some of these "swamp creatures" could care less about your needs. They just want you vote.

Don't throw your vote away. Whether you are a "D", "R" or "I", you need to start voting for candidates that will protect your union, your wages and middle-class jobs regardless of their party affiliation. So, wake up before it is too late.
