State Sen. Rich Alloway plans to resign

State Sen. Richard Alloway II announced on Friday, January 18, 2019 he will resign from his Senate seat effective Feb. 28.

According to an article published online by Pennlive®, Alloway called his decision to leave public office a retirement but noted in a statement that “the time has come for me to move on to other endeavors and pursue new opportunities.”

The article also stated that last year Alloway voted to support the first gun control measure to pass the Pennsylvania General Assembly in years, a bill that would require any persons subject to a court-ordered protection from abuse order to relinquish any guns in their possession.
