TRUMP IS STACKING NLRB ONCE AGAIN

Unfortunately we've heard this song before. Trump has named two nominees to fill the open Republican board seats. Scott Mayer was the chief labor counsel at the Boeing Company and James Murphy is a career NLRB lawyer.

There is certainly little chance that they will fail to receive Senate approval, which will give the Board a three-member majority, joining Chair Marvin Kaplan and leaving David Prouty as the sole Democratic member. While Kaplan's term expires on August 27, we can expect Trump to either nominate him for another term or replace him with another Republican.

The bottom line is that the Board will, for the foreseeable future, return to a Republican-controlled majority, which is certain to undo much of what the pro-labor Obama-Biden Boards did.

It may take some time to see the impact, but the handwriting is on the wall!
